Sunday Year A

The Baptism of the Lord.

Weekday Cycle II

"This is my Son, the Beloved; my favour rests on him."

At a graduation ceremony, a father in the audience stands, visibly emotional, as his child walks across the stage to receive their degree. As the applause rings out, he turns to those near him and says with pride, "That's my child." It's a small sentence, but it carries the weight of years of sacrifice, hope, encouragement – and love.

To be named in love is one of the most powerful experiences a human being can have. It's a moment of deep affirmation, of being seen and valued. Whether it comes from a parent, a mentor or a friend, being named and claimed in love tells us: "You matter. You belong."

But not everyone hears those words in life. Many people move through their days wondering if they are seen or valued at all. For them, words of affirmation are not just welcome; they are deeply healing. And so, when we hear the Father's voice over Jesus in today's Gospel – "This is my Son, the Beloved" – we are not only witnessing something about Jesus; we are being reminded of the power of being named and loved. Matthew's Gospel tells us that Jesus comes to John at the Jordan, asking to be baptised. John hesitates – he knows Jesus has no sin to repent of – but Jesus insists. "Leave it like this for the time being," he says, "it is fitting that we should do this to fulfil all righteousness."

Jesus enters the water to identify with us in our humanity. By choosing to be baptised alongside ordinary people, Jesus chooses to stand with us, not above us. He steps into the muddy waters of the Jordan to show that no part of human life is beneath the presence of God. In choosing to stand with sinners, Jesus sets the tone for his entire ministry: he will always be found among the broken, the searching and the lost.

As Jesus comes up from the water, the heavens open. The Spirit descends upon him, and the voice of the Father declares: "This is my beloved Son..." This is a moment of revelation. It tells us who Jesus is – the Son of God – and what he has come to do.

The other readings reinforce this identity and mission and what links these passages together is the gentleness of the mission of the one who comes to serve. Jesus does not begin with spectacle. He begins with service. He does not assert power; he expresses compassion. The Spirit empowers him, not to dominate, but to heal. The Father's love is not just affirmation: it is a sending forth. The baptism is the beginning of Jesus' mission, not the end of a private revelation.

Through our own baptism, we are joined to Christ. We, too, are anointed with the Spirit. And the voice from heaven speaks to us as well: "You are my beloved." That voice is not a one-time event. It is the foundation of our identity as Christians, and that is our deepest identity. As the American poet Maya Angelou said, "Don't you know who I am? I'm a child of God!"

But baptism also comes with responsibility. Like Jesus, we are called not simply to believe, but to live the Gospel – to go about "doing good". The servant in Isaiah brings justice not through shouting, but by lifting the crushed and freeing those who are bound captive. That is our calling too.

In a world where many feel unseen or forgotten, our task is to embody God's gentleness and mercy. And how do we help others know they are beloved? Sometimes, the most Christ-like thing we can do is simply to notice someone, to affirm their dignity, to include them, or to speak a word of encouragement. In this way, we are sent to love, to heal, to welcome and to serve. The Spirit that descended on Jesus at his baptism is the same Spirit that lives in us and sends us forth.

As we begin a new year, this feast invites us to begin again from the waters of our baptism. To remember that we are God's beloved children. And to live in such a way that others might know, through us, that they are loved too.
